Summary: This an original short horror story. I felt like writing something stupid, so I did, and this is what came out. The short story is about a boy who inherits his grandfather's laptop. When he opens it... That's something you'll have to read.

The Girl in the Computer

One day, in a building a boy named Tom was playing on his Game-boy after the funeral of his grandfather Max.

"Tom" Tom's mother called right behind him,

"What?" Tom responded.

"Here, it was your grandfathers." Tom's mother said, and then gave Tom an old dilapidated laptop.

"What is this junk?" He asked,

"Do not talk like that, Thomas!" She reprimanded to Tom, "It was your grandfathers laptop."

"Why did I get it?" He asked.

"Because Max told us that when he died this would be inherited by you." Tom's mother answered, and left the room.

Then Tom looked at the old laptop he acquired. He opened it to see it had 78% of battery. Then he saw a tab that said "The Great Incident of Great Britain" it looked like if it was an old article that was maintained by a person, and then another person got it and posted it.

Then from nowhere a message popped up in front of Tom, it said "Please help me, Max, please help me", Tom was freaked out; he thought it was just a joke that would go viral and make him illustrious. But it wasn't.

Then he corresponded, "Who are you?"

And then another message came saying, "I am no one, just a supervisor of Max, just a person, one you will never know."

Then he typed back "What?"

"I am your renovation." When everything turned off, and Tom disappeared.
